Giving
disabled children
a brighter future

‘The wheelchairs have made a massive difference to how some of the young people access the space at Hayward. Young people who previously may have spent the whole session sitting in one place are now able to see different parts of the playground with support from their one-to-one play workers. Lots of the young people really enjoy the sensory element of being on the wheelchairs. We used to push many of them round in trollies, which are now a bit worse for wear, so having wheelchairs that can survive the rough terrain of the tarmac and walkways is amazing! We've seen an improvement in the dexterity of particular young people, and their risk-taking abilities have improved three-fold, rolling down large ramps at high speed and narrowly avoiding crashing into trees is perhaps not so good for staff anxiety levels, but gives the young people a thrill that they would struggle to get in other settings!’
